Pioneer Woman Is Laid To Rest

MRS. JAMES BELL DIES HERE SUNDAY

In the death of Mrs. Lillie Bell, wife of James M. Bell, in Redwood City last Sunday following a brief illness, there passes out of the life of San Mateo county and the Peninsula a pioneer resident, the names of whose family are indelibly inscribed in the history of San Mateo county. Her husband's family and her own people came to this locality at a very early date and took an important part in developing and settling up this section.

Mrs. Bell was the daughter of the late Owen McGarvey, who in early days owned a ranch on the Woodside road at a place known as the McGarvey grade, where the Menlo Park Golf Links are located. On this ranch the deceased was born sixty-five years ago. As a young girl her beauty was known far and wide. She attended all the dances in the neighborhood and had many admirers. Over the mountains in San Gregorio there lived the Bell family on a 2300-acre ranch purchased by James Bell in 1861. He came across the plains in a covered wagon, settling in Sacramento in 1854. He had twin sons, one of whom, James M. Bell, paid court to the pretty maiden on this side of the mountain. Trips to the scene of the love making would be made on horseback, there was no other mode of travel in those days. When Miss McGarvey was eighteen, she married the Gay Lochinvar from over the mountains. Mrs. Bell went to San Gregorio to live. A little hamlet was established on a part of the big domain of the Bell ranch many years ago and it was called Bellevale and Uncle Sam in due time established a postiffice there. Mrs. Bell was named the first postmistress, a position she filled for sixteen years, until it was abolished several years ago. She was always a leader in that locality and enjoyed a wide circle of friends. It was her delight to tell of her early days on the McGarvey ranch and of her experiences at San Gregorio the mecca for hunters and fishermen.

Owen McGarvey was prominent in this section fifty years ago, and eLonard Fisher laid out the streets of Palo Alto in the eighties and before that time they farmed a large portion of the land where the city of Palo Alto is located. He was father of H. D. McGarvey, the local capitalist.

Mrs. Bell's uncle, the late Peter Doyle, was a prominent resident of this city in the early days. During the Civil war there was organized in Redwood City a cavalry troop, known as the Home Guard and Doyle was the bugler for the company. The troop took part in all the parades in San Francisco in those days and it was known for its discipline and efficiency. Many a dash was made to the coastside of the county by the brave cavalry men, all of whom are gone to the land of darkness, the land misty with the shadow of death. Among those who were members of the famous company were: Peter Doyle, Jas. M. Bell, Owen McGarvey, John Edgar, John Hancock, Larry ONeil John Titus, James Hilton and about one hundred others.

Peter Doyle will always be remembered by the poeple of Redwood City for his foresight in getting the large clock placed upon the grammar school building. It was he who raised the funds to furnish the time piece and had it placed where it is now. Doyle was a grammar school trustee at that time. Whenever the old timers look at the clock it recalls to mind the memory of him who was instrumental in securing it for the people of Redwood City. Doyle was the father of Mrs. Offield, wife of Doctor A. L. Offield of Burlingame.

James Bell, the pioneer had two sons and two daughters. One of the daughters, Gladys, at an early age married William Sears, after whose father the defunct town of Searsville was named in the fifties. The elder Sears afterwards moved to La Honda, where he lived until the time of his death. Young Sears for a time studied law in the office here of R. G. Rowley, who died in New York a short time ago. Sears gave up the law to enter business in San Francisco, where his widow now resides. The other daughter, Lottie, married Mr. Painter, the Southern Pacific agent at Millbrae. George Bell is an officer at the base hospital at Menlo Park.

The Bell ranch at San Gregorio is being developed for oil. It is believed that large deposits of oil are there and that some day it will be discovered in large quantities.

Mrs. Bell and her husband moved to Redwood City, the scenes of Mrs. Bell's girlhood and where she attended the grammar school in her teens about two years ago.

Mrs. Bell is survived by her husband and two children, Mrs. Gladys Bell Smith of this city and James Bell, an electrician of San Francisco. The funeral on Wednesday was largely attended by old friends and relatives. The interment was in Alta Mesa cemetery.

Broadway Is Topic At C. of C. Luncheon

Broadway extension was the subject of an address by City Attorney Albert Mansfield before the regular Monday noon meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce. This was the second of the luncheon meetings to be held by the local organization and was well attended. The chairman of the meeting was Mayor Henry Beeger of Redwood City.

Mansfield outlined the legal technicalities involved in the extension and showed what would be the procedure if the bond issue is carried at the election on the 12th of this month.

Other speakers were Elmore Hinman, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who explained the results of the campaign for new members and J. Daly of a local building concern who talked on town advertising.

METHODIST MEN'S CLUB TO HEAR DR. SYLVESTER

Dr. Sylvester, pastor of the Methodist church of Burlingame, will be the speaker at the next meeting of the Men's Club of the local Methodist Church next Tuesday evening, April 6. Dr. Sylvester is rated to be one of the most able speakers in the Methodist conference, and his address on Tuesday evening is being looked forward to with considerable anticipation by the members of the club.

EXCHANGE CLUB JOINT SESSION

VISITOR'S STUNTS PROVIDE MIRTH

A joint meeting of the Redwood City and Palo Alto Exchange clubs was held at the Fox Shoppe on the highway last Tuesday evening. A full attendance of the local club and about thirty-five members from the Palo Alto club attended.

The visitors were welcomed by President Carroll Hall of the local club and A. C. Hobart responded for the visitors.

Ed Scott introduced the members of the Redwood City Exchange Club, while George Mercier introduced the men from the College Town. John Springer, secretary of the Palo Alto Club, acted as toastmaster and was very clever and made it a point to see that all of the visitors met Bill Hogan, the sergeant-at-arms of the local club, and accordingly each was fined for the opportunity thus afforded of getting on the good side of Bill. The money was turned over to the charity fund.

Speakers of the evening were George Montell of Palo Alto and Guy Kennedy, a past president of the Watsonville club and now a member of the Redwood City Club

Among the stunts presented by the visitors was a joke ritual called "Crowning of the Egg" which was put on by some of the visitors. Songs were sung by Guy Lombard of Palo Alto accompanied on the piano by Kendall Towne of this city.

O. H. Olson was appointed official "Horn Tooter" of the organization.

A meeting of the board of control of the local club was held Thursday evening to complete arrangements for Charter Night, which will be held soon.

WILL CELBRATE LIFE'S HALF-CENTURY MILE POST

The handsome home of George Cirner at 412 Clinton street in this city, one of the trusted employees of S. H. Frank & Co. the well known tanning company will be the scene of joyous merriment next Monday evening, the occasion being the fiftieth birthday of Mr. Cirner and the further fact that he has very recently become a happy and proud grandfather. The guests of the occasion will be limited to those connected with the rolling room of the sole leather department, with whom the host has labored so long and faithfully. Billy Williamson, who has charge of that branch, will give a short talk, which will be broadcasted over the radio, and Cirner's fellow rollers, Patrick, Jordan, Lutje, Gabert and Loveley are each expected to step on the gas and provide an individual stunt for the entertainment of those present, while the men who handle the finished product of the company are arranging a tableaux, the details of which will be decided upon this evening. The festivities will begin at an early hour, but the time of their conclusion is somewhat problematical and is causing considerable worry in the minds of Henry Steinberger, and Louis Genochio, the manager and superintendent, respectively, of the big tanning concern, as to just how many of the rolling room employees will check in on the time cards Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock when the well-known whistle sounds its warning that the hour has arrived for the commencement of another day's work.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES AT BAPTIST CHTRCH

Easter will be fittingly observed the Baptist church on Sunday. The Bible school, meeting at 10 oclock, will study the Lord's ressurection and receive Easter cards and tokens of Easter joy. At 11 o'clock there will be an Easter message by Rev. William E. Robinson of San Francisco. Easter music will be a feature of the service. The choir will render Wilford Robertson's beautiful anthem "Lo! He Is Risen!"

In the evening at 7:30 there will be a diversified service with recitations and songs by members of the Bible School. "Easter Morning" with beautiful stereoptican illustrations will sung by the Intermediates. The choir will give Easter selections. There will be a soprano and alto duet entitled "Stars Above His Garden." A very important part of the celebration, in the evening, will be the Baptism of a number from the Bible School; a service illustrating, in part, the resurrection—"buried with Christ, and raised up into a new life."

The public is cordially invited to all these services.

NEW BUILDING FOR BROADWAY

Lot on Perry Tract Bought For Structure

Whitcomb and Smith, realtors, this week completed negotiations for the sale of a fifty-foot lot facing on Broadway in the Perry tract, near the highway. The deal includes the erection of a re-enforced concrete building, and plans are now in the hands of local contractors together with specifications.

The purchaser of the business block is J. F. Hopkins, a business man of San Francisco. The price paid for the land is reported to be $20,000. The building to be erected will cost in the neighborhood of $12,000. It is the plan of the builder to make the new structure especially adapted to the needs of professonal men. Offices will be arranged for physicians and dentists particularly. The new structure will face on Broadway and will adjoin the Broadway Groceteria. Work is expected to begin as soon as the contract can be awarded.

EMERALD LAKE TEAM BEATS KIWANIS CLUB

Although as Manager Ray Griffin of the Kiwanis Club baseball team expressed it, "every man did his darndest," the team went down to defeat Saturday before mighty swatting of the Emerald Lake team in a baseball game that was both fast and furious. Depite the fact that some of the members of both teams had not played ball since the times when dicers, sidewhiskers and canes formed an important feature in every team, the game was a good one and was appreciated by a goodly number of onlookers. The score at the end of the game was 13 to 9 in favor of the Emerald Lake Golfers.

The mere fact of defeat, however, has not dampened the spirit of the Kiwanis bat wielders and on Wednesday they accepted a challenge to meet a team from the Burlingame-San Mateo Kiwanis Club for a game in the near future. The local team is confident that with the practice obtained Saturday they will be able to hang up a victory in the next combat.

DEATH OVERTAKES SAN CARLOS RESIDENT IN S. F.

Mrs. Anne Paulsen, wife of Adolph Paulsen, well-known resident of San Carlos, passed away suddenly of heart trouble in San Francisco Wednesday afternoon. She had attended the church services, partaken of communion and had gone to the Crystal cafeteria for a light luncheon. While at the table she collapsed, a doctor was summoned and everything done that was possible, but she only lived a few minutes. A card in her purse identified her and within a short time Mr. Paulsen was notified of her death.

Mr. Paulsen has the heartfelt sympahty of the whole community, for both Mr. and Mrs. Paulsen have been friends and neighbors in the truest sense of the word. They have lived in San Carlos for fifteen years and their home and garden has been one of the prettiest in the little city. Mrs. Paulsen although ill for the last five years, was most energetic, attended to all her afafirs carefully, loved every tree and flower, and when she could assist a friend and neighbor, never neglected an opportunity to so do.

She was buried this morning at Holy Cross cemetery, services being from Mt. Carmel church, Redwood City. It being Holy Saturday, the requiem mass will be said Monday morning at 9 a. m.

REDWOOD YOUTH STRUCK KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE

Struck by an automobile on the highway as he was riding a motorcycle near San Carlos, Sunday night, Harry Mann, 19, of this city died early Monday morning at the Mills Memorial Hospital. The machine which killed Mann was driven by Bernard Russo of San Francisco.

Russo was passing another machine at the time, and claims that Mann had no light on his motorcycle. The machines met in a head-on collision and the man on the motorcycle was thrown fifty feet by the impact. His machine was completely demolished and the car was badly damaged.

Mann was not identified until the next day, when his father, John Mann of this city, worried over his son's failure to return went to the hospital, where he found him dead.

At an inquest held in San Mateo Russo refused to testify. The case will be investigated by the District Attorney.

Evolution Topic at Local Kiwanis Club

L. A. Baker, editor of the Signs of the Times, publication of the Seventh Day Adventists, was the speaker at the Kiwanis Club on Wednesday. The topic of his address was evolution, and as the sect to which he belongs is opposed to the evolutionary theory, his remarks were all derogatory to theory as accepted by scientists.

Yesterday the local club met at Mountain View and conducted the meeting for the newly formed club at that place. A large number of the local men attended.

Harry Groom was the chairman yesterday and the speaker was Roy W. Cloud. His topic was "Places which have made history in the United States."

APPRECIATION EXPRESSED FOR FIRE DEPARTMENT

A substantial appreciation of the help rendered by Bob Bell and other members of the Redwood City Fire Department was received by the department this week from J. C. Williamson. The local fire department was in a large part responsible for extinguishing the flames, which swept a large part of Pescadero last week, before the entire town was destroyed. Williamson, one of the leading merchants of Pescadero, and one of the loosers in the conflagration, sent his thanks to the local department in the form of a check for $100 accompanied by the following letter:

Redwood City Fire Dept.,
Redwood City, Calif.
My Dear Boys:

This is the first opportunity I have had since our fire loss last Saturday night to thank you for your valuable aid in coming to our rescue. It certainly was a great sacrifce on your part in responding so quickly and driving 32 miles in the night. Had our phone service not been out, you would have reached here half an hour earlier and saved some of the buildings. However, I want to remind you that I feel deeply grateful to you boys and I am enclosing a check for $100 which please accept in the spirit it is given.

Very sincerely yours,
J. C. WILLIAMSON.

REDWOOD MEN ON STATE COMMITTEE

The dates for the seventh annual observance of public schools week by the Masonic Grand Lodge of California were announced this week by Grand Master Albert E. Boynton as Monday, April 26th, to 30th. At the same time the committee was announced to have general charge of the week over the state. Separate committees will have charge of the week's activities in the various communities of the State.

Originally instituted as a Masonic function, programs being held in the lodge rooms, interest gradually increased in the annual celebration until last year school auditoriums and public halls were used and the general public invited. The meetings will be open to the general public again this year.

In the proclamation issued this week setting the dates for the week Grand Master Boynton stated that the primary object of the week was to afford the public in general and parents in particular an opportunity to become informed on the real condition of our public schools, what the schools are aiming to do and the problems confronting those entrusted with the control of school affairs and the training of children.

Entertainments and tableaux, featuring school children were an important part of the program last year and will be repeated in many communities this year, with leading educators and laymen versed in school matters as speakers.

The general committee for the state is as follows: Charles Albert Adams, chairman; Vaughan MacCaughey, secretary; Arthur Chamberlain, Wesley W. Kergan, Elias Ellison, of San Francisco; Robert A. Odell, Vierling Kersey, Harry S. Lasker, Leo T. Mullen, of Los Angeles; Arthur M. Brown, Pasadena; Fred M. Hunter, Oakland; and Roy W. Cloud, Redwood City.

GOVERNOR SCRUGHAM OF NEVADA VISITS REDWOOD

Governor James G. Scrugham of Carson City, Nevada, was here on Saturday last and called upon his former secretary, Mrs. Harvey Edwards, chief clerk in the office of Superintendent of Schools, Miss Pansy J .Abbott. The governor was on his way to the Family Farm at Portola to spend the week end. Mrs. Edwards was the governor's secretary when he was the State Engineer of the Sagebrush State and later acted in a similar capacity when Mr. Scrugham was made a major in the army during the late war. He was placed in charge of the Ordinance department at Washington and had charge of the gun division. He was mustered out of the service as a colonel and at once came to Nevada, where later he was elected the chief executive of the state. He would have made Mrs. Edwards his private secretary but the young lady preferred to live in the sunshine of California.

The governor is very popular in his state and comes up for reelection this fall. There is no doubt but that he will be returned to office.

No Club Can Stop Pittsburgh If Pitchers Hold Up

The Pittsburgh Pirates will win the National league pennant again if their pitchers hold up, in the opinion of Wilbur Cooper, former Pirate left-hander and now on the staff of the Chicago Cubs.

Cooper, who was traded by the Pirates in time to lose out of the world series "melon," has no lingering affection for the Pittsburghers, but he is forced to admit that the Pirates, in his judgment, are the class of their league.

"I hope the Cubs will win," said Wilbur, "but watch Pittsburgh, if their pitchers hold out. They have everything else—hitting, good fielding, speed and youth. Beating the Giants and then Washington was just what the Pirates needed to give them self-confidence."

Cooper said it was impossible to gauge the Cubs' chances because of the great number of new men on the club, but he predicted that the new Chicago manager, Joe McCarthy, will be a success. Cooper himself feels "fine," but said he never predicts regarding his own success.

Although the veteran southpaw does not expect to use resin himself, he thinks that the new rule will help the pitchers, but will not cut down the hitting much.

"Resin will help the pitchers to grip the ball, thereby giving them better control," Cooper says. "I don't agree with those who say that pitchers will 'cheat' by using illegal stuff to doctor the ball. A few may try it, but the majority will obey the rules."

DODGER EXCHANGE HELP TO MILLERS

Addition of Seven Players Makes Minneapolis Factor.

The deal whereby Johnny Butler went to Brooklyn in exchange for seven players has "made" the 1926 Millers in the opinion of Manager Mike Kelly.

Four infielders, two pitchers and an outfielder were added to the local roster by the transaction. This gave Minneapolis a surplus of seasoned players in virtually every department. Kelly figures that his infield worries are all cleared up, as Cotton Tierney and Horace Ford were Brooklyn regulars last year at second and shortstop. Tierney is booked for third, while Ford and Chuck Corgan, Western league flash, will compete for the short field job.

Five southpaw pitchers, headed by Rube Benton, are depended upon to circumvent the right field fence. Kelly has 12 right handers.

The heavy hitting 1926 outfit of Duncan, Smith and Fisher will be augmented by Schultz, bought from Cincinnati, and Loftus, former Dodger fly chaser.

Since the release of Eddie Ainsmith and Butch Henstock, who failed to handle the backstop position creditably last year, Kelley has fortified himself with two able receivers in Ernie Krueger and Butch Byler, bought outright, respectively, from the Cincinnati Nationals and Oakland of the Pacific coast league.

Morgan's Record Better Than Tristam Speaker's

Charley Morgan, a catcher on the Macon team in the South Atlantic league, put himself in a class with the best of them last season when he smashed the record for consecutive hitting which Tris Speaker hung up in 1920. Speaker's record was eleven straight and Morgan turned in an even dozen in a row.

The Macon backstop started his run in a game on May 31, when he hit safely in his last two trips to the plate. In his next game he got four hits out of four at-bats, duplicated the stunt in his next game, made a hit in his one time up in a fourth contest, and then poled one on his first time up in the fifth game.

Prince Presents Cup

The prince of Wales has announced his intention of presenting a challenge cup for hunters, any weight, to be ridden by a woman, at the Richmond royal horse show. There will now be three royal challenge cups in competition at the exhibition. The king presents one of these for the best-trained horse in the mounted-police classes; the duke of York another for the officers' jumping competition, and the prince of Wales now associates himself with the hunter section.

Waddell Had No Earthly Use for Any Nightshirt

There is an ancient story of "Rube" Waddell which still is told with much gusto by some of the older generation of baseball men.

It seems that the Rube, having fallen into one of his gloomy and introspective moods, had gone off by himself and wound up finally in a small cracker-barrel grocery store in North Philadelphia.

As he was sitting there, moodily contemplating the rottenness of terrestrial existence, a dry-goods drummer came in and started exhibiting his samples to the proprietor. When he had drawn forth from his case two lengthy and voluminous garments Waddell was stirred sufficiently from his murky thoughts to put a query:

"What's those things you got there?" he asked.

"Nightshirts," said the drummer, and then, thinking that he might there and then give evidence to the merchant of the ease with which his line moved, inquired snappily, "Maybe we could sell you one or two—what?"

"Naw," said Rube, relapsing once again into a state of boredom, "I don't set around much o' nights."

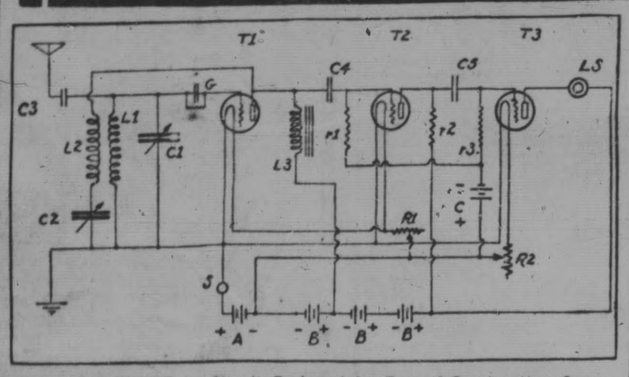
RADIO



A Simplified Three-Tube Circuit Designed for Ease of Construction, Operation and Superb Tonal Quality. Honeycomb Coils Used for Tuning.

By BRAINARD FOOTE
In Radio World.

Listeners who prefer moderate volume, combined with almost perfect reproduction, will be interested in the simple entertainment receiver to be described. The faithfulness of its tone output is dependent upon the system of audio frequency amplification, which, in this set, is a combination of a stage of impedance-coupled amplification and a stage of resistance-coupled amplification.

In addition, the use of the half-ampere power tube is considered in the last stage. Since this tube requires about 135 volts of "B" battery, the use of resistance coupling calls for no additional plate voltage. Impedance coupling is adopted for the first stage since this provides superior detector action and greater detector output. Moreover, with a good impedance coil for the first stage, the quality is good. A honeycomb system of tuning is shown, with a primary coil made unnecessary by the expedient of employing a small fixed condenser as the coupling medium. Thus the assembly of the outfit is not difficult. The output of volume is not so great as can be obtained by the use of more tubes and more audio amplification, but on this very account its tone qualities are better and its operation more pleasing.

Will Operate Loud Speaker.

A receiver of this character will operate a good loud speaker, either of the horn or cone type, to advantage.

In the symbolic diagram C3 is the coupling condenser whereby the energy picked up by the antenna is delivered to the set. L1 and C1 form the tuned circuit of the set, L1 being a 50-turn honeycomb coil and C1 a .0005 mfd. variable condenser. Regeneration is handled by the "shunt" plate circuit L2 and C2, L2 being another 50-turn coil and C2 another .0005 mfd. variable condenser. The two coils are mounted by means of two honeycomb coil mounts. They should be as far apart as possible, so long as sufficient regeneration is to be had on the longest waves.

G forms the combination grid and leak and condenser, a .00025 mfd. condenser and 2-megohm leak. T1 and T2 are two 01A type tubes, whereas T3 is a power tube of the 112 type, taking ½ ampere at 5 volts. L3 is the coupling impedance for the first stage. It may be a special impedance coil made for the purpose, or, with as good results, the secondary winding of a large-sized audio transformer. This stipulation is made to insure the use of an impedance coil having enough turns of wire and core iron to pass all the audio frequencies.

C4 is the coupling condenser for the first stage. A condenser as small as .002 mfd. will answer fairly well here, but better results are obtained both as to volume and range of musical tones if the condenser is made at .01 mfd. or even up to 0.5 mfd. A grid leak resistance r1 of 1 megohm or ½ megohm is required to properly bias the grid of tube T2 and to prevent it from becoming choked with negative impulses. Instead of the impedance just described, a coupling resistance is adopted for the second stage, since this is even better than an impedance when it comes to passing all the musical frequencies.

Power Stage.

Resistance r2 should be approximately 100,000 ohms (0.1 megohm). Such resistances can be purchased in the form of an ordinary grid leak and all the essential resistances may be snapped into regular resistance clip-holders. These holders, which come with the resistances r2, should be well made in order that the heating effect of the "B" battery current that must pass through it may not alter its resistance and cause noises or distortion. Condenser C5 is just like C4. The grid leak r3 should have a resistance of about ¼ megohm (250,000 ohms) to properly bias the last tube and prevent overloading or choking.

Tube T3 is a ½ ampere power tube, used because its greater power will result in somewhat greater volume of output and a very marked gain in tone quality, since overloading is eliminated. A jack is provided for the loud speaker connection, the loud speaker LS being indicated at this point.

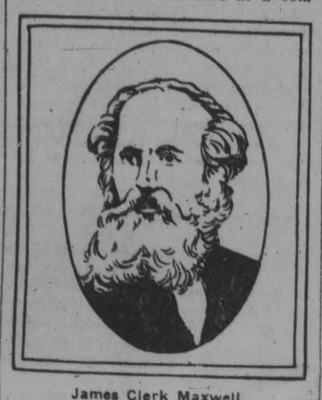
Now for a few remarks about the battery and filament circuits. Rheostat R1 takes care of lighting the detector and first stage tubes T1 and T2, while rheostat R2 handles the power tube. A snap switch S, located at the left end of the panel, serves to turn the set on and off. Thus the rheostats may be maintained at the proper points permanently.

A 4½ volt "C" battery is employed, as indicated. Three 45-volt "B" units are required.

FOREFATHERS OF RADIO

By GEORGE LEWIS
of The Crosley Radio Corporation.

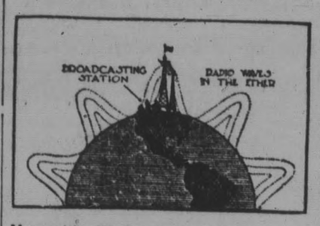
The beginnings of radio may be traced back to the scientific work of James Clerk Maxwell, the celebrated British physicist. Maxwell was born at Edinburgh, Scotland, and conducted his brilliant researches at a comparatively young age, dying at Cambridge, England, when but forty-eight years old.



James Clerk Maxwell.

He believed that light was due to waves in an invisible medium which scientists call "ether." He believed, further, that light was some kind of an electromagnetic phenomenon. It was these ideas of Maxwell's that led Hertz later to the discoveries that made radio possible.

If Maxwell were right in his assumption that light was both a wave motion and electromagnetic in nature, the scientists could expect any vibrating electric current to send out waves of some kind, just as a vibrating violin string sends out sound waves. Maxwell's work was first published in 1873, but it remained for Hertz to establish experimental proof of his theories some fifteen years later.



Maxwell's Theory of Electromagnetic Wave.

Maxwell is honored among physicists as the mathematical wizard of his times. His theoretical work is the basis upon which much of modern physical science rests. Especially is this true in the realm of electrical theory, where his work is constantly referred to as the great authority which has inspired modern ideas of electricity. Radio scientists have Maxwell to thank for first having opened the door to the developments that have led to the modern science and art of radio.

Some Antenna Hints for Better Reception

The radio listener, and especially those living in the large cities, are hampered sometimes to a very great extent by the presence of shielding objects, such as steel-framed buildings, metal-lathed rooms, guttering, etc. These obstacles are so often overlooked entirely that they greatly affect reception of all kinds, and sometimes render a receiver completely inoperative. These conditions can be remedied to a great exient by improving the antenna and ground systems of the installation.

Moderate-size metal objects within close proximity to the antenna and which are insulated from the ground, will not affect the efficiency of the receiver. It will in all probability alter the natural wave or frequency of the antenna, which will, of course, change the tuning. Such objects as metal window frames, screens, etc., do not affect conditions materially, provided their nonmetallic surroundings or supports are dry.

If there is a resistance to ground, the effect becomes serious and results will depend on the amount of the resistance involved. Well-grounded objects will act as a shield and will reflect or absorb incoming waves so that the energy is lost to the antenna.

Even though this energy is not absorbed to a great extent by the objects, a current will be set up in them which will give rise to a reradiation and will be a frequency or wave length in proportion to the natural period of the object. This can, of course, be picked up by the receiver at a different point on the dials.

It is advisable to keep the antenna clear of any metal objects and at right angles to guy wires, etc. Loop receivers cannot be operated in a room which is shielded with metal lath. Reception can be improved by bringing a short outside antenna into inductive relation with the loop. The lead-in itself can sometimes be laid over the loop.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process
Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded by our customers.
With the "F. Thomas Process" we not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.
Raw gasoline—the kind that you buy for your automobile—is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. It is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell in your clothes.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Germany's Election to the League of Nations Is Postponed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THE League of Nations assembly on March 17 voted to adjourn the question of Germany's election to the league until the September session. The vote came after announcement by Afranio Mello Franco, Brazilian representative, that the decision of his country not to vote a permanent council seat for Germany unless Brazil was given one at the same time, was irrevocable. Then Sir Austen Chamberlain gave notice that it would be impossible for him to propose the admission of Germany into the league at this time. He concluded a long speech by expressing the conviction that the September assembly would see "that great nation, Germany, assume her rightful place within the League of Nations."

As a result of this action there is profound disappointment among well-wishers for the League of Nations throughout Europe over the breakdown of the session of the league called to elect Germany to membership. In some countries the hope of an agreement at Geneva tending toward general peace and security is regarded as indefinitely deferred, and fears are expressed that there will arise political recriminations in their domestic politics which may add to the difficulties.

Such recriminations already have been strongly manifested in England, where the anti-government press is making every effort to bring about the political downfall of Sir Austen Chamberlain, the foreign secretary, who, with Premier Briand of France, is declared to be the author of the Geneva collapse. Chamberlain's mission will be discussed next week in the house of commons, and a vote of censure may be moved against him. In such a case the present indications are that he would be saved by the big conservative majority. There are some reports, apparently based on speculation, that he will forestall an attack by resigning.

It remains to be seen whether Premier Briand can inject his optimism regarding the future of the league into his countrymen. Dispatches from France reflect the disappointment over the failure at Geneva as are expressed elsewhere. Briand must resume his difficult task of restoring the financial situation of his country to normal. With the failure of the league to elect Germany to membership, his "security" ambition failed of accomplishment, as the Locarno pact cannot become effective until Germany is a league member.

Chancellor Luther and Foregin Minister Stresemann of Germany must face parliamentary fire, particularly on the part of the Communists and Nationalists, who will endeavor to unseat them.

THE Prince of Wales and Stanley Baldwin, the prime minister, figured in a "bombing" scare on St. Patrick's day which still is a source of mystery. While the prince was attending the St. Patrick's day banquet of the Irish club in London someone in a passing taxi threw into the entrance of the restaurant where the dinner was held a cardboard box from which acetylene fumes were escaping. An examination showed the contents included among other things moistened calcium carbide and a piece of tarred rope. No damage was done.

A similar "bomb" which blazed fiercely and emitted clouds of smoke was flung from the gallery of the Hotel Cecil where Mr. Baldwin was attending a St. Patrick's day banquet. It fell on the table not far from Mr. Baldwin, rolled on the floor, and set fire to the carpet. Consternation was caused among the guests. A woman at a table near Mr. Baldwin fainted and was carried out. The prime minister, however, remained calm and the fireworks and burning carpet were soon extinguished.

There was nothing to show whether the missiles were mischievous pranks, or the manifestation of anger by persons with grievances or a political protest of some Irish irreconcilables against their countrymen's hobnobbing with British royalty and British ministers.

Odd Plea Wins

In England a man convicted of burglary has had his sentence reduced by the court on the ground that his objection to women on the jury was ignored.

SENATOR SMITH BROOKHART (Rep., Iowa) will lose his seat in the upper house in favor of his Democratic opponent, Daniel F. Steck, if the senate elections committee upholds the report submitted by a subcommittee which holds that Steck was elected by a majority of 1,420 votes. The subcommittee report was presented by Senator Caraway (Dem., Ark). It was unanimous, the other members being Senator Ernst (Rep., Ky.), who is chairman of the full elections committee and the subcommittee; Senator Watson (Rep., Ind.), and Senator George (Dem., Ga.).

In holding that Steck is entitled to the seat the subcommittee took the position that the intent of the voters in the November, 1924, election should be recognized. Iowa election authorities threw out hundreds of ballots which were marked by arrows which were designed to make it clear that the voters desired to vote for President Coolidge and at the same time vote for the Democratic senatorial nominee. Arrows of this sort had appeared in newspaper ballots, and many voters, not being aware that such action might invalidate their votes, copied the marked ballots, arrows and all.

Senator Brookhart is one of the four members of the La Follette group read out of the party by action of the Republican senate caucus. If he is unseated he will be free to enter the primaries as a candidate against Senator Cummins (Rep., Iowa) and it is regarded as certain that he will make the race.

THE United States and other powers delivered an ultimatum to Chinese factions demanding that blockade of the port of Tientsin be ended and all impediments to harbor and river traffic be removed. The ultimatum, signed by signatories of the protocol of 1901, was handed to the commanders of the forts at Taku and Chinese vessels outside of Tientsin. The United States, Great Britain, Japan and Italy have a dozen or more naval craft in these waters. The protocol of 1901 made stipulation concerning the disarmament of forts at the mouth of the Pei river, on which Tientsin is located, and also guaranteed an open way to the sea.

The blockade has been preventing access to Peking from the sea and recently resulted in Chinese troops firing upon two Japanese destroyers.

EVIDENCE that the law has not yet caught up with the radio is shown by a peculiar case of "radio slander" that has occurred in Chicago. State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe was sitting at home the other night, listening to a radio program broadcast from a downtown cabaret. He was startled to hear the station's announcer tell the world that Mr. Crowe and some of his friends at that moment were seated at a conspicuous table at the cabaret, enjoying the entertainment.

Mr. Crowe ordered the arrest of the announcer, who was held in jail for twelve hours before he was formally charged with disorderly conduct. Mr. Crowe's assistants spent much of the intervening time trying to find some more serious charge to place against the prisoner, but there were none. The law has not yet caught up with radio. Mr. Crowe can sue the announcer for damages, but presumably cannot indict him. If, instead of telling thousands of listeners that Mr. Crowe was having a night out, the announcer had published a handbill to the same effect, he could have been charged with the crime of libel. The law makes that distinction between the spoken and the printed word. To defame a man by word of mouth is slander and no crime; to defame him by means of the printed word may be criminal libel.

Prosecution of the case against five defendants has been set for April 24 and the decision of the court may set an important precedent in bringing the laws of slander and libel up to date in this radio age.

ANOTHER important event in the radio world was the passage in the house of representatives by a vote of 218 to 124 of the White bill designed to create a federal radio commission of five members to co-operate with Secretary Hoover in keeping order in the air, where broadcasting and other forms of wireless in the past have operated in some instances with great confusion. The bill provides for the issuance of station and operators' licenses by the secretary of commerce. Opposition to it centered about the contentions of some members that no machinery was provided that would insure against radio monopoly and that it gave the secretary too much power.

Only one major amendment was added to the committee draft of the bill. This change, proposed by Representative Davis (Dem., Tenn.), struck out a provision to give the Commerce department the power to remit fines imposed for infraction of radio regulations. The five members of the radio commission would be appointed from five zones to be established. Operators who were refused licenses would have the right to appeal to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. It was stipulated that the President should have power to close any station during war "or other emergency."

UNDER a suspension of the rules, hotly contested by a minority group, the house of representatives passed the Porter bill, authorizing the appropriation of $10,000,000 for the purchase or construction of adequate embassy and consular buildings in foreign capitals.

Under the terms of the bill, which was approved by the President, the budget bureau and the State department, expenditure of the money will be limited to $2,000,000 a year for five years, under the direction of a building commission, which will include three members of the house and representatives of the State department. The bill is designed to permit the concentration in one building of all government activities in a particular foreign capital.

MANUFACTURERS in the Middle West were rallying for a final fight against passage of the Gooding bill, pending in congress. If enacted, the bill would have the practical effect of preventing permanently the interstate commerce commission from rescinding its ruling against establishment of cheaper rail rates on certain commodities from Middle West points to Pacific coast cities.

Mid-West shippers take the position that without the cheaper "long haul" rates they cannot hope to compete with their rivals on the Atlantic seaboard on account of low rate water transportation via the Panama canal. Manufacturers say important industries are likely to desert Chicago for more favorable locations adjacent to water routes. Refusal of the commission to grant the request of industrial leaders of this section and of the transcontinental railroads, that the through rates be lowered, spurred to a greater activity opponents of the Gooding bill. Many believe the commission's ruling may weaken opposition to the bill in congress.

SECOND LIEUT. JOHN S. THOMPSON of the United States army was hanged for the murder of his seventeen-year-old fiancee, whom he said he could not live without or marry because of his insufficient salary. He was the first American officer to be executed in peace time.

Thompson killed Miss Audrey Burligh at Manila in the early morning of April 5, 1925. She was the stepdaughter of Capt. Hamilton P. Calmes, medical corps, and they were engaged to be married.

THE annual circus season this year will lack one of its greatest thrills for the children, according to word coming from headquarters of the big circuses at Peru, Ind.

The circus parade, it has been decided by showmen there, is to be abandoned. The high-priced performers, especially the Europeans, will not parade. The big circuses now visit only the larger cities, it is explained, and noonday traffic problems and the growing distance of the circus lot from the railroad make the parade physically impossible.

Ten years ago there were 20 circuses with trains of ten or more railroad cars. Now there are only a dozen, but these have expanded until the largest circus in the country travels with 1,500 persons, and the smaller ones carry about 600.

CAUSE FOR REJOICING

NO element in our universe holds so important a position as our sun. From the sun alone come health, light, life, power, warmth, in fact, every essential of existence. Without its warmth, without its light and without its wonderful chemical properties life could not exist, and if it did exist in any form known to us of this world it would be a dreary round of existence.

Imagine then the consternation of our primitive caveman ancestors who with the first dawning of reason noticed that the sun was sinking longer and longer into that black void which he could not understand, but which like a great sea swallowed the bright orb which made him comfortable, thawed out the streams and drove the frosty rime of the ice king back. What was his horror to view each day shorter and shorter and to see the sun each day waining in power.

Then what must have been his joy to see that the sun had apparently revived, again it regained its power, shown with a greater warmth and was apparently, overcoming the spirit of darkness with which it appeared to combat. So the day which we now know as the winter solstace became a great day of rejoicing, the day when the sun god was born. For this god, the personified sun, was said to be born in the winter solstace thousands of years ago when the sun was still in the constallation of Virgo. So he was pictured as a baby who as the year advanced grew to strong manhood.

Then came the time of victory, the time when having attained his strength he would conquer the evil which had caused his death in the fall. At the vernal equinox, when the days once more become longer than the nights, and the sun shines with renewed strength, the conquering sun appears as the hero of ancient fable. At this period the world rejoiced that the god apparently overcome by his enemy, darkness, had risen triumphant over the evil.

This was the old story which thousand of years ago swept the world from the windswept heights of Thibit, through India, Asia Minor, Egypt and on up into Britain and Scandinavia. This was the basis of Druidism; this was the story of Hercules; this was the story which appeared in every land of the ancient world.

Today we look with no apprehension on the sinking sun. We know that its sinking is temporary and that it will shine again. The element of fear is no longer with us. But even yet who can see the days lengthening without rejoicing? Who can look about and see the vitality of nature renewed and not feel a reverence for the Power which has set the seasons and appointed their meets and bounds. Science has removed the fear and mystery which made the ancient sun god a potent factor for thousand of years throughout the world. But science has not explained that greater mystery of life. And so at this season we rejoice as did our ancestors of centuries ago for spring, for life and the rejuvination of all nature.

LAW REFORM NEEDED

THE average citizen is desirous of observing the laws of his nation, state, county and town yet to keep posted on the laws of the state alone, is according to State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson, a lifelong task. The multiplicity of laws makes a multiplicity of law breakers and there is not a person who during the course of a day does not break several laws, although unknown to himself.

Any citizen who set out to familiarize himself with the laws now in effect, said Johnson, would be required to read two statutes daily for a period of twenty-six years. If the present rate of 500 new measures per legislative session continued, he would still be confronted with 6,000 new acts at the end of his long period of study, the treasurer added.

Charging that the statute books are cluttered up with unnecessary legislation, Treasurer Johnson said that a study just completed revealed 19,207 state laws in full force and effect, in addition to thousands of federal acts and county and city ordinances. The state measures, he pointed out, contain an average of from one to ten sections and in some cases run into hundreds of sub-divisions.

"Under present conditions," declared Johnson, "even attorneys find it practically impossible to keep informed on new legislation. If lawyers are unable to keep up with the law makers, the plight of the average citizen is apparent. The task is hopeless. Yet, if he runs afoul of some one of the 19,000 old statutes unknown to him, he is likely to be penalized for his ignorance."

"Recently, I called attention to the need of a state convention to revise our obsolete state constitution. I intend to carry this message to the voters of California in my campaign for reelection as state treasurer. And I intend to link with it a statement in favor of the creation of a code commission to discard unnecessary laws. Such a commission could draft changes that would greatly simplify state statutes, and a vote of the Legislature would complete the task."

TO RECEIE TREMENDOUS VOTE

THE reports coming from all sections of California indicate that Senator Samuel M. Shortridge will be chosen the Republican standard bearer at the August primary election by an overwhelming vote. Mr. Shortridge has consistently and constantly supported the policies of the president and this alone should entitle him to the consideration of every republican who believes in party solidarity and to party responsibilites. The senator's six years of service at Washington are full of brilliant achievements both for the state and nation. He has done more for the state in those six years than any other senator has done in a similar period. The people of California know this and the voter is going to demonstrate this by giving the junior senator a tremendous vote of approbation next August.

MOVIES

SCREEN SANTA CLAUS DOUBLES FOR REAL ONE

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, Christmas scenes for motion pictures are not always made in midsummer. This was proven when Director Frank Tuttle filmed the Christmas scene for Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "The Untamed Lady," on the morning of the day before Christmas.

The set represented the great hall of the Van Tassell mansion, in the center of which was a twenty-foot Christmas tree laden with gifts. There was even a Santa Claus to distribute the presents to the dozen or more children who are in the photoplay.

In addition to using the tree in the production, Miss Swanson, Mr. Tuttle and the members of the company made it the centre of a little studio celebration. The entire personnel bought little gifts for one another, and the screen Santa Claus had a lot more work to do than his role really demanded.

Gloria Swanson in "The Untamed Lady" will appear at the Sequoia Theatre on Broadway next Wednesday and Thursday, April 7 and 8.

DIDN'T HAVE MONEY WITH WHICH TO GRASP FORTUNE

Imagine owning a fortune and not having the money to get it.

This was the distressing experience of Henry B. Walthall, noted screen and stage actor, who will be seen in "The Barrier," coming to the Sequoia Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, April 5 and 6 and Harry Carey, western star.

Walthall and Carey, some years ago when motion pictures were just beginning to buy the works of famous authors, made arrangements to produce a Rex Beach story. In this way, they obtained exclusive screen rights to all of Rex Beach's works.

The result is that Walthall today is appearing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in a play he would have owned had be been able to finance its production.

George Hill directed "The Barrier," said to be the most thrilling of Beach's frontier tales, and the cast includes Norman Kerry, Lionel Barrymore, Marceline Day, Henry B. Walthall, Pat Harmon and Bert Woodruff.

AUTHORITIES RECOMMEND ICE TO ELIMINATE WASTE

Whatever the general opinion regarding the effectiveness of United States Government investigations, there is one which is producing tangible, beneficial results. That is the elimination of waste campaign, now being conducted by Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover.

The United States is one of the richest countries in the world with respect to natural advantages. As a result, it is or has been until recently probably the most wasteful country in the world. The Elimination of Waste campaign was inaugurated to correct this condition. Already the results of this campaign have become apparent. There has been an increase in railroad efficiency, larger and faster trains operating at a lower cost of fuel per ton-mile. A fuller utilization of water resources, for irrigation and power, has been attained.

The most important phase of the waste problem, however, lies in the home; and has to do with the conservation of food stuffs. The amount of food which, in the United States, is annually wasted because of spoilage, is tremendous. Consequently, authorities are recommending the use of a well-iced refrigerator as the most efficient most economical and safest means of reducing such waste. The small cost of ice is returned many times over in hte amount of food saved—to say nothing of the increased value of the food. Kept properly chilled by ice, food stuffs are free from germ activities, and retain a maximum nutritive value for a much larger period than where ice is not used.

"FRIENDLY INDIANS" POW WOW

The first Pow Wow of the Friendly Indian Tribes (boys 9 to 12 years of age) of the Y. M. C. A. of San Mateo county was held at San Mateo Park Saturday afternoon.

Close to twenty boys representing the three Tribes of Redwood City were in attendance. The total number present from the seven tribes in the county was more than seventy-five.

The Mohawk Tribe of South San Francisco was out with practically 100% attendance in full regalia with their Big Chief, Chief, Tom Tom Beater, Medicine Man, Indian Rnner and Wampum Bearer and close to twenty tribesmen. With the blankets, tom tom and headbands full of feathers they made a very fine impression. The Friendly Indians from Redwood City also made a very fine appearance. Pictures were taken of the entire group.

The following events were run off for inter-tribe competition: 50-yard dash, progressive standing broad jump; 50-yard shuttle relay, baseball throw for distance and one inning playground baseball eliminations.

The standing of the tribes in these events was as follows: Mohawk Tribe of South San Francisco, first; Cherokee Tribe of Burlingame, second; Algonquin Tribe of Redwood City, third; Dakota Sioux of Redwood City, fourth; Assinaboin Sioux Tribe, Redwood City, fifth; Pawnee Tribe of San Mateo, sixth; and Navajo Tribe of San Mateo, seventh.

Membership in these tribes is open to any boy between the above ages. Further information can be secured by calling the Y. M. C. A. Boys Work Secretary at Redwood City 1155-W.

Plans are being made to hold the next Pow Wow with a real Indian present to give the boys some Indian stories first hand.

You Can't Smoke History

A fellow from Carolina wants to know where I get the idea that "Bull" Durham and George Washington come from the same state. He says, "Why don't you write and give the people the real History of 'Bull' Durham in its native State, South Carolina, that people would appreciate that more than these Bull Legends of yours."

Now thanks, Sir, for your good-natured suggestion. If I knew History I wouldn't be able to write "Bull" Durham Ads. I would be a College Professor, get everything right, and get nothing for it. Everything you suggested me telling the public about when and where "Bull" Durham originated, has been told for 66 years by typical Advertising writers. That's the only thing the Company asked of me was "please don't tell again where it came from, or how." You see you didn't read their Ads, but you did read mine and remembered it, because it was wrong.

Writing Ads that will be remembered is a queer game. This is an Ad, not a History. I selected Ads over History on account of the pay. (American Tobacco Company's pay is as good as its tobacco.) Where "Bull" Durham comes from or where it goes to is left for the starving Historian.

P.S. You notice I named in this article the WRONG Carolina. That's so North Carolina will get sore because I named South Carolina, and South Carolina will get sore because I didn't name North Carolina. A true Southerner never forgets.

P.P.S. There will be another piece in this paper soon. Watch for it.

Cleaning Without Odor by the F. Thomas Process

Our many years of experience has taught us that it is impossible to do perfect cleaning with cheap, inferior methods. That is why we found it necessary to invest nearly $500,000 in the equipment of a plant and the establishment of an expert organization to do the quality of work demanded bp our customers.

With the "F. Thomas Process" we not only remove every particle of dust but we return your garments without that usual disagreeable smell of gasoline. Every drop of gasoline we use in cleaning is redistilled and very highly refined.

Raw gasoline—the kind that you buy for your automobile—is full of heavy oils and unfit for cleaning fabrics. t is little better than ordinary distillate and leaves a sickening gasoline smell in your clothes.

The WATER BEARER

By J. ALLAN DUNN

Author of "A MAN TO HIS MATE" "RIMROCK TRAIL"

© By Dodd, Mead & Co. WNU Service

HERO AND HEROINE

Here's a new kind of story of the West—a romance of hydraulic engineering. Mining, ranching, lumbering and railroad building have been the favorite subjects of the fictionists and many a good story have they given us. Here's a new kind of hero—a young New Englander born under the zodiac sign of Aquarius and destined to be in very truth a "Water Bearer." The heroine is a "native daughter" of California. And around the water-bearing exploit of the Eastern man and the Western girl revolve fascinating adventures "by flood and field" and a story of true love that runs far from smoothly at times. As for the author—why, he's J. Allan Dunn, whose Western stories have deservedly won for him a wide popularity. And here East meets West—and a stirring romance grows out of the meeting.

CHAPTER I

The Canyon

Caleb Warner conscientiously fished every foot of the likeliest-looking hole he had seen on Hermanos creek, but there came no rise, no eager tug, no submerged gleam of a rainbow's shimmering flank.

He waded ashore, put up rod and tackle, climbed through the thick, tall ferns and brambly undergrowth to the narrow trail and turned upstream. All the day was his, the next, for that matter, and he fancied the fishing would be better higher up. Caleb walked with his coat tucked between the slings of his creel, his shirt open at the throat; lean, long, well-shouldered and slender-flanked, tanned of skin, springy of action, generally good to look at. By the canons of moving pictures and magazine illustrations he was not handsome. New England ancestry had made him too aquiline of feature, but he had youth and strength, his gray eyes were clear, his forehead high to his straight, close-cropped hair, his lips clean-cut and his chin well forward, not too narrow. His general make-up was typically American, Yankee-American, unmarred by inbreeding.

Below him Hermanos creek sang, half hidden by the undergrowth. His economic, New England brain saw potentiality going to waste. In Massachusetts Hermanos creek would long ago have been harnessed. Mills and factories would have sprung up along its banks. Here was water for steam, for turbines, for commercial and domestic use, for irrigation; lit unused, its energy seemingly doomed, for there was a peculiar thing about the creek that Caleb, as an engineer, had noted. Contrary to the habit of most well-mannered watercourses, its volume diminished as it flowed.

He was twenty-seven, six years out of the college chrysalis that he had spun at Columbia. He had served in the war, hard, practical service in tasks that were low-grade but necessary, the crude, swift work of building and repairing war-roads and bridges, and in it Caleb Warner had, in large measure, found himself. He had acquired initiative, resource, command of men, if nothing else. And he had come out unscathed, unwounded, ungassed, reduced to an acme of coordination, sane mind and sound body. He had been granted wider horizons. So he had come west to find his oyster—and to open it.

Swiftly the woody cave of the canyon became a tunnel, the creek now far below him in a water-chiseled gorge. The tunnel became a gut. A suspension bridge, a shivery thing of wire rope and short planks, anchored with wire cables to high walls of rock, crossed the gorge. It shook under his tread and hung trembling as he stopped midway to look at the gush of compressed water surging through the gap, twenty feet down. There were signs on the rock that at times the creek rose close to the flooring.

Before him, to the south, lay Hermanos valley, a green bowl lipped by rolling hills, their crests bronzed by the summer sun, blazened with great patches of golden poppies, with clumps of purple lupine, the lower slopes furred thick with wild oats waving in the wind, oats as high as Caleb's head, a shimmering sea of emerald and silver.

He stood for a while undecided whether to adventure on to the waterfall or to stay where he was until it was time to fish down the canyon with the hope of better results than the three trout his persistence had lured from the creek. He had a book tucked into his pocket but he was not tired. And he had lunched an hour before.

The view held him. Looking down, he saw that the stream was a vagrant, that, in the rains, one bed was not enough to convey its waters. A second course, now dry and partly grown over, erratically paralleled the actual creek. Willows bordered it.

Along this idle water-track, racing so fast it seemed a gray streak, head down, brush lowered, a coyote ran at top speed, pursued, not hunting, covering ground at a frantic pace, pressed to its utmost by fear.

After it, perhaps fifty yards away but gaining at every bound, sped a gallant, beautiful hound, white-coated, taper-muzzled, bearing its tail like a great plume, overhauling the coyote with tremendous leaps, going at a terrific rate, yet so smoothly that its speed seemed effortless—a Russian wolfhound.

Beyond the willow fringe came her mate, bound for bound, level with the bitch, unseen, though perhaps not unknown to the coyote.

Then, from a thicker growth of trees, outmatched but traveling fast, a pinto flashed into Caleb's view, a boy crouched low on the withers, welded to the horse, urging it on.

Caleb thrilled to the chase as it swept on beneath him, admiring the horsemanship of the figure in breeches, puttees and fluttering blouse, a little envious of it.

"Gad, he can ride," he muttered.

A cap blew off, a long tress of chestnut hair, ruddy as a flame, whipped out, was reached for and tucked in by its owner, only to stream errant again. The boy was a girl!

The bitch was almost up with the coyote, the dog, watchful through the gaps in the willows, came circling in, jaws agape, ready for the kill. The coyote made a last desperate effort. The bitch, with one enormous leap, came abreast. She lunged, her white neck like a snake's for speed and sinuousness, her teeth clamping down on the forefoot of the coyote. Caleb saw the latter checked, tumbling, heard a broken snarl of defiance, and then the second hound sprang in a white gleam of fury, too swiftly for him to catch the action. Its powerful jaws, bred for the work, crunched through the vertebrae of the coyote's neck. The hunt was ended.

The girl rode up at a gallop, checked the pony in midstride and slid to the turf while the two hounds thrust their muzzle at her. With one hand she patted them while with the other she strove to coil up her hair, now fairly down her shoulders, reaching to her belt.

"Good boy, Saratof! Good girl, Siva!"

Caleb heard her faintly but plainly and shouted down his own meed of applause. He had left most of his innate reserve behind him in Europe and the stir of the hunt still held him.

"Bully for both of them!" he cried and waved his hat as the girl looked up. She smiled, waved back an ungloved hand at him in western friendliness, and finished the upwisting of her hair without embarrassment. Caleb started down through the outs. He loved dogs. He did not know so much about girls. But this one seemed different. And he had left the conventions behind in Massachusetts.

She smiled at him again as he came out on the level, half waded, half jumped the creek and went toward her. The wolfhounds looked at him with their dark brown eyes, sniffed, accepted his pats and turned their heads away, pointedly aloof. The girl laughed at his evident chagrin.

"They are disdainful beasts, my borzois," she said. "You must excuse them."

"They are marvelous runners. I did not suppose anything could overhaul a coyote. But it hardly seemed fair up there on the hill. Two to one, I mean."

She looked at him quizzically. She was frankly surveying him. He noted that she was about six inches shorter than he was—which made her five feet six—that she was at once slim and rounded, that she had a short straight nose and a mouth that was neither small nor large, neither full-lipped nor narrow, a round chin, a dimple in one cheek, and that her eyes were the exact color of the lupines. Also that there was no nonsense about her. A part of Caleb's curriculum, a majority of his experience, had consisted in the training of his powers of observation. In the brief glances he had permitted himself he had done very well.

"There are not very many coyotes where you come from?" she queried.

"How do you know?" She laughed and he added that and her teeth to the catalogue. Both were, to his taste, perfect.

"How do I know? I am sure now. Does anyone but a Yank reply to a question with another one?"

"Yank! Are you a southerner?"

"There you go again. Wait. I must answer your charge against my dogs. If you think it was not sporting to set Saratof and Siva against one coyote, how about my helpless calf that was butchered last night? And half a dozen others this summer. And a colt! There are probably fifty coyotes who make this valley their larder. Gabilan shelters scores of them. And these two have accounted for nine of them. It is sheer justice, administered mercifully. The coyote always has the start. It is killed instantly, not worried, not touched afterward. My borzois don't eat carrion."

"Acquitted," answered Caleb. "I beg their pardons. I am a Yankee from Massachusetts. I am a civil engineer come west to seek my fortune. My name is Caleb Warner. I live in Golden and I was recommended to Hermanos creek for trout fishing.

She had a trick of looking through long lashes that was a bit unfair, Caleb thought. But they did not hide a twinkle that lurked behind them.

"Did you catch any trout, Mr. Warner?" she asked. He showed her his basket.

"We have trout in New England," he said. "I was hoping to do better later in the afternoon. Did you say you were from the South?"

"I am a Californian." He was certain that she knew he had hoped she would give him her name in return. "The best fishing is in the canyon back of the waterfall at the head of our valley," she said. "You can easily climb the cliff."

"You own it? The valley?" She opened her eyes a bit in acknowledgment of his persistence and speed to take the opening.

"My father does. His name is Clinton." She had evaded it cleverly. Miss Clinton. That was as far as she would go. Caleb bowed to his defeat.

"Well, then, Miss Clinton, do you think your father would have any objection to my fishing through his meadows, later, after I have been above the fall?"

"I am quite sure he would not. Perhaps you would like to meet him? The house is not very far from here." Caleb laughed and she with him.

"I should be delighted," he said. "And I am very glad to have met you Miss Clinton." She took his hand and shook it as a boy might have shaken it. More strongly, with fingers that were firm and cool. There was nothing of coquetry about her. Her suggestion that Caleb meet her father held, he felt, no hint of flirtation. It showed that she liked him, a little, sufficiently to dispense a measure of hospitality that he had come to recognize as a western attribute.

"The house is there," she said, pointing. "Back of those eucalypts. Father planted them for a windbreak."

The girl had left the pinto pony standing with its reins hanging straight from bit to soil, an effective haltering. Now she placed them about its neck, their buckle back of the saddle-horn and, as she and Caleb walked along the stream toward the house the pony followed as closely and sedately as the wolfhounds.

Evidently Miss Clinton is what we Americans call "a nice girl," with individual attractions. Does the Yankee measure up?

Undersea Craft Idea Dates Back Centuries

Few and evil have been the days of the submarine, which it is hoped to banish from the fleets of the world. But experimentally the idea goes back into a very remote past. Aristotle speaks of some kind of submarine vessel used in the siege of Tyre more than 2,000 years ago, and there are occasional mentions of the idea through history.

In the Sixteenth century we come to the bishop of Upsala's claim to have invented a boat for scuttling ships from below, and in 1626 Charles I gave a Dutch inventor an order for "boates to go under water," though they do not seem to have been used against the French. There were the rudimentary and unsuccessful "turtles" of Bushnell in the Eighteenth century. But an ill fate pursued the early inventors.

Fulton's submarine was rejected by France, England and America in turn, and he set himself to the more usual work of designing boat engines. Johnson's submersible, which was to have rescued Napoleon from St. Helena, came to nothing. Bauer, who was taken up by the prince consort, drowned the crew of his submarine, though the admiralty seems to have been largely to blame.—Manchester Guardian.

Origin of Hat Unknown

It is difficult to state just when hats were first worn, and there is no record as to where or when the first hat was made. The first modern hat, as we know this article of men's wear, was made in Paris in 1404 by a Swiss manufacturer, but it was not until 49 years thereafter that the French adopted any sort of a head covering.

Churches in Business

An old Jewish synagogue in Maiden lane, London, is now used as a theater for rehearsals, and a Methodist chapel in Southwark, where Wesley preached, is used as a paper warehouse.

The famous Surrey chapel, where Rowland Hill preached, is today the great boxing rendezvous known as the Ring. At Willesden an old chapel has been converted into a draper's establishment, the pulpit being used as the cash desk; another, in the Hampstead road, has been turned into a picture palace.

The Union Jack club, opposite Waterloo station, stands on the site of a Methodist chapel which had lost its worshipers, while St. Andrew's, Tavistock place, was once a fashionable church, but has been in turn a cycle store and a club.—London Answers.

FUR-EDGING ON SPRING COATS; OUTDOOR FROCKS FROM PARIS

O SMART appeal for spring is the fur-edged cloth coat. That fur is strictly a winter item is a nonexistent thought among "we moderns." A touch of fur enriches, fur flatters and becomes the wearer, fur discreetly used solves the problem of deftly finishing the edges of many a garment. Wherefore, says the stylist, if not in words at least in deeds, why not make fur an all-the-year-round trimming feature?

The treatment and dyeing of fur is another "reason why" fur is such a popular style item. We no longer recognize and pay our respects to furs for what they are, but rather what they appear to be. Thus the woman of smart fashion is satisfied if the fur which details her coat be of handsome appearance, blending in color to the cloth it trims. Many of the most arresting spring coats are of exquisitely textured woolens distinguished with dainty fur edgings just as the picture shows.

A wee bordering of gray erminette outlines the edges of this coat, which itself is styled of superbly fine wool rep. A great deal could be written on the subject of rep, for it is one of the season's most fashionable materials for coat-making. It comes in all the leading shades, navy and a series of gray tones being outstanding. Dull rose-colorings and green are also exploited in this fabric.

Some of the exceedingly conservative spring coats appear in demure grays or mellow tans with cunning upstanding collars which are edged with a narrow bit of squirrel or perhaps summer ermine, the latter often dyed to an exact match of the fabric.

White woolen sports coats carry white ermine collars, sometimes with a corresponding fur banding around the cuffs.

Behind these two sketches of tailored frocks from Paris is the authority of great names—names which would arrest the attention of the world of fashion, even if the sketches failed to. Beauty, originality and cleverness in designing have placed these names at the head of their craft and so their creations are worth examining.

At the left of the picture a model from Jenny is one more good reason for her prestige and the loyalty of her clientele. Here is a black frock which might be made in either silk crepe or woolen goods, cut with a conservative flare below the hips and having plaits inserted at the front of the skirt portion. It is worn with a lingerie vest—the vest front is an important item in spring modes and is brightened by touches of red and gold embroidery on the cuffs, also being in the ornament at the front.

The frock at the right, from Lebonier, is typical of spring's tailored styles. A rather light gray cloth was chosen for it, with revers and scarf of red crepe georgette but another color might be used for these accessories, or the color of the dress for those who prefer one color. Soutache braid appears to furnish the three simulated buttons at the right side and three narrow bands at the left side which suggest elongated buttonholes. These frocks are suitable for town or country wear and are pictured short, for youthful wearers. But three inches added to their length will not interfere with their modishness and will make them better suited to many wearers, both in the matter of becomingness and personal taste.

Getting Things Mixed

Grandmother had been telling Rosemary stories that ended with, "And they all lived happily ever afterward."

On returning from Sunday school Rosemary was telling her mother the lesson story. The lesson was the story of the "Lost Sheep." She told how the Good Shepherd had counted his sheep, had found that one was missing and had gone in search of it. Calling and searching, resting and searching again, he had at last found the lost sheep and carried it home in his arms.

And, added the little maiden in a very cheerful voice, "they all lived happily ever afterward."

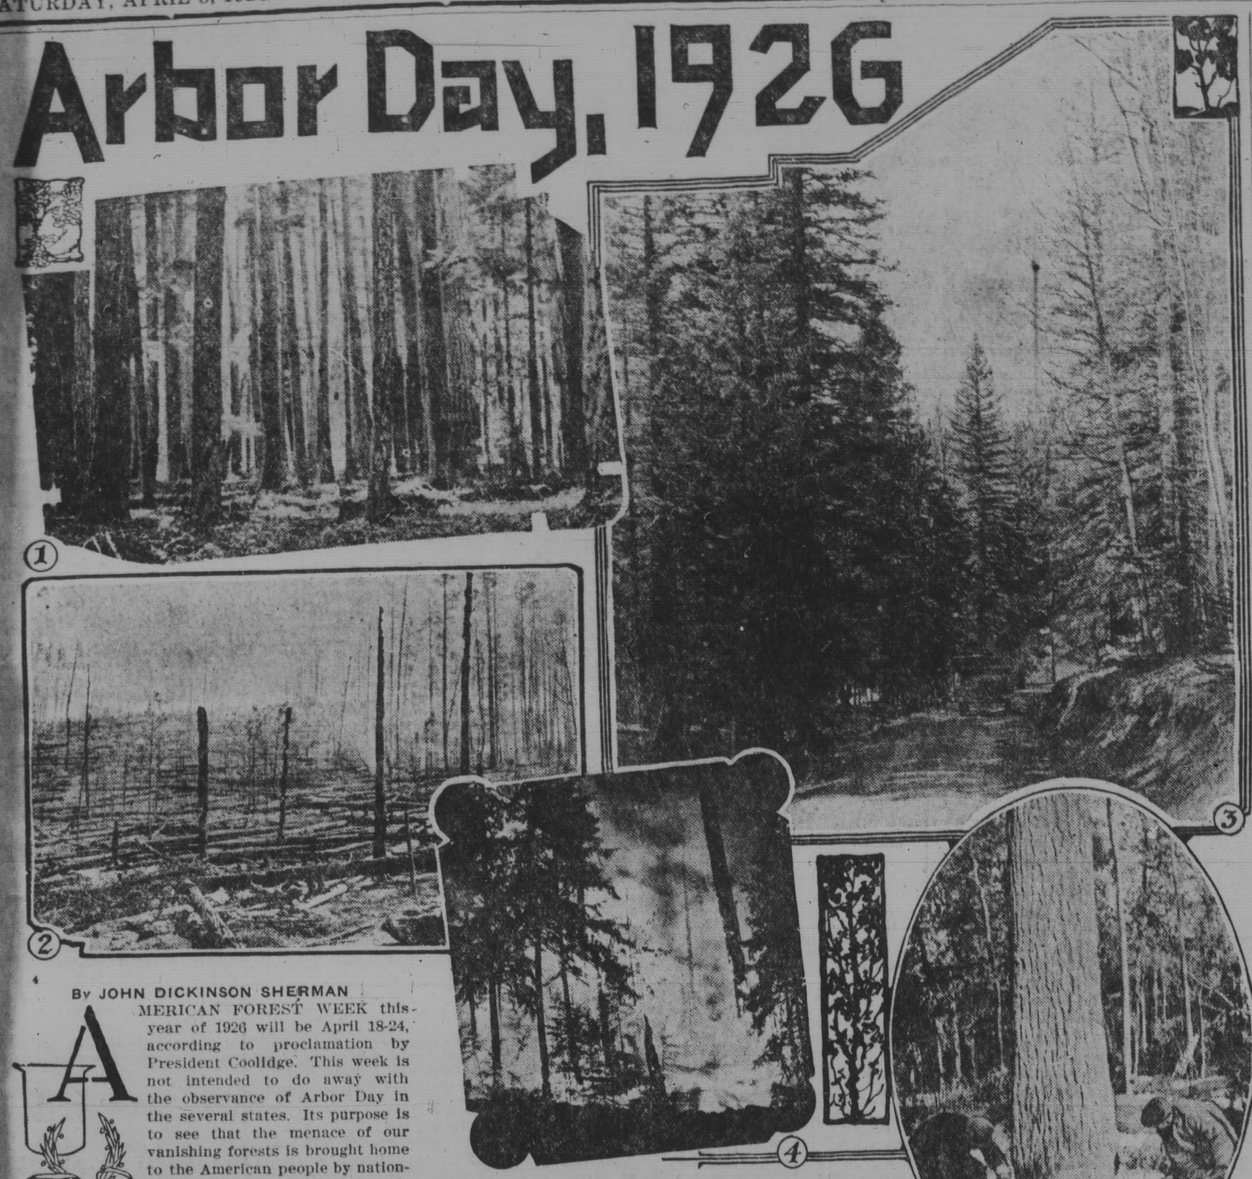
Arbor Day, 1926



By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

AMERICAN FOREST WEEK this year of 1926 will be April 18-24, according to proclamation by President Coolidge. This week is not intended to do away with the observance of Arbor Day in the several states. Its purpose is to see that the menace of our vanishing forests is brought home to the American people by nation-wide observance during that week of the spirit of Arbor Day—by educational programs, by demonstrations and tree-planting.

Arbor Day is being increasingly observed in various parts of the country, but has little legal standing and its observance is a hodge-podge, just as is that of many of our holidays. In fact, the standing of Arbor Day as a holiday emphasizes the curious state of affairs that obtains in the nation as to holidays.

Congress has passed no laws establishing holidays for the whole country, with the exception that it has designated the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day. It has made Labor Day a holiday in the District of Columbia. President Wilson issued a proclamation May 30, 1916, requesting that June 14, the anniversary of the day on which the Flag was adopted by congress, be observed as Flag Day throughout the nation.

So, when everything in the way of business stops on Christmas, New Year's and Independence Days it is because of general custom and not because of congressional legislation. Beyond this everything is a mix-up. The legality of a holiday, in whole or in part, seems to be largely a question of geography—state laws having wide divergence.

Illinois offers a fair example. Its legal holidays have been established by the legislature, largely through laws affecting negotiable instruments. New Year's Day, Christmas Day, July Fourth and Sundays have been accepted as legal holidays since the beginning of the state's history (1818). Thanksgiving Day—proclamation by the President of the United States and by the governor of Illinois—has been regularly observed since 1863, the year of Abraham Lincoln's first proclamation. Election Day was first observed as a holiday in 1872 and was later limited to elections at which members of the legislature were chosen. Following are the dates on which Illinois legislative acts creating legal holidays since 1881 were approved:

Washington's Birthday, May 30, 1881; Memorial Day, May 30, 1881; Labor Day, June 17, 1891; Lincoln's Birthday, June 17, 1891; Saturday afternoons in cities of 200,000 or more population, May 13, 1905; Columbus Day, May 10, 1909; Mother's Day, May 8, 1914; Indian Day, June 21, 1919; Armistice Day, June 24, 1921. Nevertheless, organized labor, which does no work on Labor Day, works on Washington's Birthday, Lincoln's Birthday, Armistice Day, etc. And so on.

Arbor Day in Illinois is supposedly appointed by the governor. It usually comes on the third Friday of April in the northern part of the state and on the fourth Friday of October in the southern part.

Arbor Day in most of the states is—at least in theory—appointed by the governor. Kansas is one state that has fixed Arbor Day by statute. Its date is October 12. This is because Kansas was a treeless state and Arbor Day was considered important. Nebraska also has given Arbor Day a fixed date, April 22; that was out of compliment to Julius S. Morton of that state who was secretary of agriculture in the Cleveland and McKinley cabinets and was influential in promoting the observance of the day. Utah is the third state to have a fixed date for Arbor Day, April 15—tree-planting was essential in the early days of the settlement of that state and the Mormons made the desert blossom like the rose.

So Arbor Day is scattered all over the calendar. It comes as early as "the first Monday in February" in Arizona and as late as "the first Friday in December" in Georgia. Colorado, which has a climate a good deal like that of Arizona, usually observes "the third Friday in April."

And here's another angle to the observance of Arbor Day: The fall is a much better season than the spring for the planting of many kinds of trees. For this reason a number of states are getting into the way of having an additional tree-planting time of several days in the fall; the occasion is entirely unofficial and is due to local interest. It is evident, therefore, that the observance of Arbor Day in the country is largely a matter of locality.

American Forest Week was until last year called Forest Protection Week. Its main purpose was the protection of our national forests—and forests in general—against fire. Its program was directed by the United States Forest Service, the bureau of the United States Agricultural Department which has charge of the national forests. But the forestry problem is now of national importance, with many phases and ramifications.

So last year at a meeting in Chicago of representatives of many of the interests concerned in this forestry problem the week was renamed the American Forest Week and its scope greatly widened. Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, presided.

Mr. Lowden explained that public interest in forest restoration and protection had now become so general and insistent that it was necessary to broaden the designation of what had been Forest Protection week. The interest of the people in the forests is far more than that of protecting them from fires, fundamental as such protection is. It is that of national welfare, resting on the indispensability of wood in industry and commerce, and the importance of forests in stream control, irrigation, general agriculture, prevention of erosion, recreation and climatic effects.

Viewed in this light, American Forest Week has an appeal in the treeless regions as well as in the forest country, and the changes in public policy that must be made if the forests are to be perpetuated must proceed from a universally formed public opinion. He further pointed out that now that economic changes are beginning to make forest perpetuation profitable and therefore possible to private owners, a public movement in the interests of forestry has become practicable. Such a movement, he said, was also necessary to formulate and apply a great, latent public opinion in favor of a definite forestry policy for the nation.

Mr. Lowden was elected permanent chairman of a directing committee of approximately 100 organizations more or less affiliated in forestry and conservation matters. Five vice chairmen were named to assist Mr. Lowden, viz: Mrs. John Dickinson Sherman of Colorado, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Frank G. Wisner, Mississippi, president of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association; Will Dilg, Chicago, president of the Izaak Walton league; William B. Greeley, California, chief of the United States forest service; George D. Pratt, New York, president of the American Forestry association. Headquarters for the committee will be in Washington with Edgar P. Allen, director, in charge and Miller Hamilton, secretary.

Former Governor Lowden is a leader in the co-operative movement among the farmers of the country. He is also a practical "dirt farmer." He practices what he preaches in the way of forestry and has set out thousands of pine trees in barren spots on his big Illinois farm. "No man holds good enough title to any acre of land," he declares, "to leave it in a less fruitful condition than when he got it."

Mrs. Sherman represents a body of organized club women with a nation-wide membership of about 3,000,000. It is probably the most powerful organization in the country today. For more than a generation the General Federation has been an active promoter of Arbor Day and all that it stands for. Mr. Dilg is a leader in the Izaak Walton League which was largely instrumental in the establishment of the fish and game reservations along the Upper Mississippi and has purchased large tracts in the Jackson Hole region for the winter relief of the Yellowstone elk herds.

Local American Forest Week committees are now at work in all parts of the country on the plans of observance. It is expected that through the programs being arranged every community will be deeply stirred during American Forest Week to an appreciation of the dimensions and urgency of the nation's forest problems, such as protection from fire and destructive taxation, reforestation, extension of forest areas, utilization of the forests for recreational and industrial purposes, and the creation of conditions promotive instead of deterrent of forest maintenance.

President Coolidge, in his American Forest Week proclamation, called attention to the fact that the Canadian government has set apart the same week for the same purpose. "This," he said, "is an added reason why our citizens should give careful thought to a matter so important to both countries."

Although warning that "too long have we as a nation consumed our forest wealth without adequate provision for its wise utilization and renewal," the President noted that a "gratifying change is taking place in the attitude of our industries, our landowners and the American people toward our forests."

"The wise use of land," he continued, "is one of the main foundations of sound national economy. It is the corner stone of national thrift. The waste of misuse of natural resources cuts away the groundwork on which national prosperity is built."

The pictures given herewith are suggestive. No. 1 shows a bit of timber under scientific forestry; every farmer's woodlot should look the same. Nos. 4 and 2 show a forest fire burning—and what it leaves; in 1924 something like 29,000,000 acres of forest were fire-swept and it would take 300 years and $300,000,000 to replace their burned forests—at the rate we are now doing reforestation. No. 3 is a glimpse of the Kaibab National forest on the North Rim of the Grand Canyon; the deer are too numerous there and are eating up all the young growth in a struggle for existence. No. 5 is an object-lesson of the fact that two men with a saw can in a few minutes undo two or three centuries of nature's handiwork.

Many powerful organizations are among those working to straighten out the forestry problem. The American Engineering Council, for example, will co-operate in a national observance of American Forest Week, it was announced by the president of the council, Dean Dexter S. Kimball of Cornell university. The council, through its constituent societies, numbering more than six thousand engineers, is carrying on nationwide efforts to save the nation's forest resources. The engineers make this point, among others:

"Long before our coal supply is exhausted the price will have gone to a point which makes it practically impossible to utilize it for heating our homes. When the coal supply has gone to a price which we cannot afford to pay, then we shall be more and more dependent upon our water supplies, and yet those water supplies are being destroyed. They are being destroyed because the forests, the tree growths on the watersheds, have been destroyed, and as a consequence the earth and matter that can flow with our floods is carried into the streams. The silt is therefore filling up streams and reservoirs and destroying water power."

The American Tree Association, of which Charles Lathrop Pack is president, is going an important work in getting individual citizens to plant trees. It has a large and rapidly increasing membership—plant a tree, register it at the Washington headquarters and become a member; there are no dues. Mr. Pack has just published the "Forestry Primer," which will be sent for 3 cents for postage. The year 1926 marks the semi-centennial of the first step in forestry of the federal government. The publication of the "Forestry Primer" is another step in the American Tree Association's campaign to get forestry facts before schools, clubs and civic organizations.

"The 'Forestry Primer,' says Mr. Pack, "aims not only to mark this semi-centennial date, but aims to direct the public opinion of tomorrow to the great importance to our economic structure, of that corner stone of our country's economic safety—forests."

Bank Has Had Three Centuries of Life

One of the oldest banking institutions in Italy, the Monte del Paschi di Siena, has celebrated the third centenary of its foundation, and the event offered King Victor an occasion to pay a visit to the historic town. The bank was formed by the fusion of three old banks, and its present name has a curious origin, says a Rome correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

In the Fourteenth century the people of Siena were sadly in debt, and it was decided to pay off this obligation through the natural resources of the city, namely, the revenues derived from the sale of salt and from the pastures (paschi) in the neighboring districts. The bank rapidly rose to importance and branches were opened all over Italy, but its prosperity really began when the ruler of Siena allowed the "magistrate" of the bank to accept money on deposit and to invest it in commercial enterprises. The political changes which occurred in Siena during the last three centuries did not affect the stability of the institution and its flourishing conditions were greatly increased after the incorporation of Siena in the Italian kingdom.

Eve's Appetite

"One day," said a story-teller, "at the close of a hot day, Adam was returning with his hoe on his shoulder from a hard day's labor to his humble cottage. Maybe it was a cave. That don't matter, for it was a humble abode. Young Cain was running ahead, boylike, throwing rocks at the birds. Suddenly they came upon a beautiful garden.

"'O father,' said Cain, 'look at that beautiful garden. I wish we could live there.'

"'We did live in that garden,' said Adam regretfully, 'until your mother ate us out of house and home.'"—The Christian Evangelist.

To be truly happy is a question of how we begin and not how we end, of what we want and not of what we have.—Stevenson.

EVERY-DAY GOOD THINGS

A simple inexpensive meat loaf which may be served with a brown or tomato sauce is prepared in this manner:

Meat Loaf.—Take one pound each of pork and round steak chopped fine, preferably in the chopping bowl; add two teaspoonfuls of salt, one beaten egg, one-half teaspoonful of sugar, one cupful of strained tomato, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley and a small onion, finely minced. Brown the onion in a little of the pork fat, season with pepper and add the other ingredients with a cupful of crumbs. Mix well and shape into a loaf. Bake about one hour, basting often with the liquor from the pan. Remove the loaf and prepare a sauce by adding flour to the fat, adding tomato juice or water or soup stock, if at hand, for the liquid.

Crushed Wheat With Raisins.—Add a half cupful of wheat to three cupfuls of boiling salted water and cook until the water has disappeared. Now add three cupfuls of hot milk and cook until the wheat is soft. During the last hour of cooking add half a cupful of raisins. Raisins are healthful and are an addition to almost any cooked cereal.

Eggs sur le Plat.—Beat the whites of eggs until stiff, using three or four, place on a buttered platter, make hollows in the egg with a spoon. Drop the yolks unbroken into these hollows and sprinkle with salt and pepper, dot with bits of butter. Bake until the eggs are set, then serve.

Liver With Onion Sauce.—Dredge thin slices of liver (which have been parboiled) with flour and fry brown in pork fat. Place the cooked liver on a platter and fry chopped onion in the fat. When light brown add a teaspoonful of vinegar to a cupful of onions and pour the sauce over the liver.

Baked Sardines.—Skin twelve large sardines, bring to a boil in a little water, reserving the oil which was drained from the can. Add a cupful of water, a teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, a teaspoonful of made mustard and vinegar and salt and pepper to taste. Arrange the fish on a hot platter and set into the oven. To the boiling sauce add a beaten egg yolk and pour over the fish. Serve at once.

Steak and Rice.—Mix and cook all together about one-half hour, the following: One pound of round steak ground, two cupfuls of rice, one chopped green pepper, pepper and salt to season, one onion cut fine, one cupful of canned tomato, one tablespoonful of melted fat.

Spinach Greens.—Wash two quarts of fresh spinach greens, dry and shred. Fry one cupful of raw ham a light brown, add one tablespoonful of vinegar. Add one beaten egg with one-half cupful of rich milk. Cook with the greens until they are wilted. Stir constantly.

About Common Fruits.

Every housekeeper who plans meals should have a clear understanding of the qualities of fruit. She should know that fruit in season is not a luxury, but a real necessity. This same list has been published before, but it is worth repeating every little while.

The citric fruits are—Lemon and lime—Excessive citric acid, antibilious, potash salts, lime and magnesia.

Orange—Moderate citric acid, laxative, valuable.

Grapefruit—Excessive citric acid, bitter, tonic, purifying.

Strawberry—Citric and malic acid, antibilious, potash, lime, soda.

Cherry—Tonic.

Cranberry—Citric acid, iron tonic.

Currant—Citric acid.

Gooseberry—Citric acid, malic acid.

Subacid fruits are:

Apple—Malic, phosphates, laxative, sugar.

Peach, apricot—Laxative, sugar.

Plum—Nitrogen, sugar, laxative.

Grapes—Tartaric and phosphoric acids, potash salts, iron, excessive sugar.

Raisins (dried grapes)—More laxative than fresh grapes.

Pineapple—Natural pepsin, sugar.

Raspberry, Loganberry, Huckleberry—Mild, refreshing, moderate sugar.

Blackberry—Iron, constipating.

Elderberry—Astringent and medicinal.

Starch and sugar fruits:

Banana—Constipating, excessive starch, unless very ripe.

Fig—Very laxative, sugar, protein.

Date—Excessive sugar, protein.

Alligator Pear—Oil, starch.

Melon—Refreshing, sugar, purifying.

Such fruits as water and muskmelon contain 95 per cent of water. The flavor is agreeable and in hot weather they are especially refreshing when served well chilled. The value of fruit in season cannot be overestimated. Langworthy says that dried fruits compare favorably with cereals.

Children should have plenty of orange juice, fresh apples and dried fruits when other fruits are not in season.

WOMEN FIGHT POWERFUL FOE

Struggle Against Ill Health

Find a Faithful Ally in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MRS. ADOLPH HANSEN
HOLMQUIST, SOUTH DAKOTA

Holmquist, South Dakota.—"I can not begin to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was sick for about four years. I could not sleep, and I was always worrying, so one day we saw your advertisement in a paper, and I made up my mind to try the Vegetable Compound. I bought one bottle and did not see any change, so I got another bottle. At the second bottle I began to feel better and I have used the Vegetable Compound ever since, whenever I feel badly. I recommend it and I will answer any letters asking about it."—Mrs. Adolph Hansen, Holmquist, South Dakota.

Could Work Only Two Hours

Encanto, Calif.—"I bless the day I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was so weak and tired all the time I could not work more than two hours each day, then had to go to bed for the rest of the day. I read so much about the Vegetable Compound and I was so weak that I decided to try it. I now do my own housework—washing, scrubbing, and ironing—and then help my husband with his garden. I do not have that worn-out feeling now. I advise every woman to give your wonderful medicine a trial, and I will answer any letters I receive from women asking about it."—Mrs. Stella Lay, 700 Jamacha Road, Encanto, Calif.

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

If you are fighting this battle, let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound be your ally, too.

The real cause of bad breath

"You cannot 'cover up' unpleasant breath for any length of time. The only way to rid yourself permanently of it is by removing the cause.

"Sometimes poor teeth are responsible. But the commonest cause of a coated tongue and offensive breath is constipation. You may not realize that your intestines are slow in eliminating waste matter, or that your breath is objectionable. But others will notice it.

"Get rid of constipation, and your breath will become fresh and sweet. Even more important, you will notice an immediate improvement in your health and spirits."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's own way

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle, and so natural in its action.

Nujol simply makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time.

Ask your druggist for Nujol today. Remove the cause of bad breath and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

News of Menlo Park

Returns From Boyhood Home

Frank R. Cain, who owns a beautiful home on Santa Cruz avenue, returned last week from his boyhood home in Chicago. He spent a month there and during that time only saw the sun three times. The weather was 10 degrees below zero and constantly snowed and rained. Mr. Cain was glad to return to the land of sunshine and flowers. He is a retired attorney. For years he was the political leader of the Windy City, and also a leader of the Chicago bar. He delights in romping about his attractive gardens, watching his strawberries grow, counting on his big tomato crop. He owns fifteen acres intensively cultivated. Blackstone and Kent are entirely forgotten in his muses

Sharon Estate Being Improved

Mrs. Fred Sharon is having all the roads in and around her vast estate rocked and placed in condition. Several thousand dollars will be expended in this improvement. Harry Morey is doing the work.

Clough Home Sold

Mr. Clough, the builder, has sold his beautiful home at Atherton to a San Francisco business man for $10,000. Mr. Clough has large holdings on Pine street, where he has erected several fine houses.

Floods Leave for Atlantic Coast

Mrs. James L. Flood and her daughter and son, Miss Mary Emma Flood and James L. Flood left Wednesday for the Atlantic coast and will sail soon for an indefinite stay in Europe. They plan to pass the spring and summer in England.

Mildred May Cooper Passes Away

Mildred May Cooper, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Cooper, passed away suddenly Tuesday morning after a tonsilar operation. She was a sweet and happy little girl, beloved by all, and her demise is a sad blow to her parents who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. The child is survived by her father and mother and a brother. Mr. Cooper is the Ford agent located on the highway.

No Opposition in Atherton Election

The opposition that was apparent some time ago against the incumbent trustees of Atherton has not materialized as the members of the present board have no opposition for reelection. Those nominated without any opponents are Joseph A. Donohoe, Edward L. Eyre and Eli Wiel. They are splendid men, capable, efficient and honest, and have the interests of the community at heart. It is well for any locality to have such men serve the public for they command respect an have the confidence of the taxpayer.

Native Sons to Give Card Party

Next Monday night, April 5, in Duff and Doyle hall, the Native Sons will give a card party. This will be the first party after Lent and therefore a big attendance is expected. Good prizes will be awarded the winners of the game. On the afternoon of Thursday, April 8, in the same hall a card party will be given under the auspices of the Native Daughters.

Menlo Theatre to Open May 8

On May 8 the new Menlo Park Theatre on the highway will open with a blaze of glory by a big vaudeville show. The large garage erected by Boyd Braden has been transformed into a modern show house with all the conveniences and comfort of a city theatre. A big pipe organ is being installed and the foyer is being painted in Egyptain style by Mr. Doxsee, the artist. Mr. Braden promises to show only the very best and cleanest of pictures. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 600. Mr. Braden has expended the sum of $25,000 on the building and equipment. It will be conducted under his management.

Girl Scouts Enjoy Hike

The Girl Scouts enjoyed a hike to the Bear Gulch Lake last Monday and after romping around sat down to a delightful lunch. On returning to Menlo Park the troop partook of a dinner under the tall trees of the Menlo Park Gardens, thus came the end of a happy day.

Chamber of Commerce Active

Menlo Park is to have a harbor where ocean-going steamers will dock and Cooley's Landing will be the port for all shipping activities. The chamber of commerce appointed a committee last Monday evening consisting of D. E. O'Keefe, J. J. Harcom and M. P. Montgomery to investigate the matter and to report to the chamber as soon as possible. It is the wish of the chamber to develop the harbor. A railroad spur track from the S. P. Co. runs close to the landing and is a locality where rail and water meet. A history of the ancient landing appeared in this paper last week. It was one time a busy place, a veritable beehive of industry and it may again be if the chamber carries out its ideas. A deep water channel is closeby where the largest vessels may dock with securtiy. The establishing of the harbor may bring terminal rates that would induce and encourage manufactureres to locate in that favored spot.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge was unanimously elected a member of the chamber and later on suitable resolutions are to be adopted endorsing his candidacy for the senatorship.

Supervisor John MacBain was given a vote of thanks by the chamber for his good work in improving the Sand Hill road.

Frank Caine, E. E. Quayle and M. P. Montgomery were appointed a committee to secure signs to be placed on the La Honda road, where the Skyline boulevard ends to direct the travel down the Portola road and over the Sand Hill road to Menlo Park Properly inscribed signs will be put up by the committee.

Adoption of the borough system of government in case of annexation was favored by the directors. This would provide for the retention of the court house and county officials at Redwood City.

The directors voted to get into the fight for incorporation with both the financial and moral support of the chamber. The issue will come to a vote April 19.

E. E. Quayle, in charge of the banquet committee, announced plans for an ambitious dinner, April 12. Mayor James Rolph, Jr. of San Francisco, he said, had been asked to speak and had accepted. Other notables whom the committee has invited to be present and address the organization are Harvey M. Toy, chairman of the state highway commission; H. Clay Miller, president of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce; M. M. O'Shaughnessy, city engineer of San Francisco; C. E. Kunze, special writer for the San Francisco Call, and John Sutton.

Large Number of Moths

The large number of moths in this locality portends swarms of caterpillars by and by to feed upon the succulent leaven of the oak trees and rob them of their attractive verdure as they did last year. It would be well for all property owners to spray their oaks at once thus preventing the pesky, loose jointed caterpillars from denuding the trees which are the charm and beauty of the peninsula.

Menlo Ball Team Defeats Vets

The Menlo Park baseball team last Sunday defeated the United States Veteran Hospital nine on the grounds of the latter by a score of 9 to 1. The sensational feature of the game was the catch made by the outfielder, "Kippy" Morey. Babe Ruth has nothing on Young Morey as an outfielder. The home run made by Feeley was also an outstanding feature of the contest. A large crowd witnessed the game.

Alumni to Hold Food Sale

St. Joseph's Alumni will hold a food sale in the building adjoining the postoffice today. Home-made pies, cakes, salad and other culinary products will be offered for sale by a bevy of pretty young ladies, graduates of the school. Secure your food supply for Easter. Come early and get the good things that will be offered.

Leaves for Honolulu

Miss Loava Carter, the pretty young nurse, left htis week for a trip to Honolulu to remain for an indefinite period. She spent a few days here with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Melbourne Carter, before sailing.

Menlo Park A Mecca

Menlo Park appears to be the Mecca for the real estate men. The latest to join the ranks is Frederick Croker, a distinctive home subdivisionist, from Marin county. Mr. Croker has lossed an office in the Brown building.

Relinquishes News Agency

P. R. Lane, the local agent for the San Francisco papers, has relinquished the agency to give all his attention to the American Products Company of Cincinnatti, Ohio, which he represents on the Peninsula.

Annual Communion Observed

The second annual communal of St. Joseph's Alumni took place in the Church of the Nativity on Sunday at the 8 o'clock mass. About 150 of the young people received communion. The breakfast was served at Cafe de Paris of Atherton and enjoyed by the communicants.

A drug firm from San Francisco has leased quarters in the new bank building on the highway and will open an up to date pharmacy shortly.

Robert Moore Opens Home

Robert Moore has opened his palatial home on Valparaiso avenue. The Moores will entertain considerably during the season.

Mary Kathleen Kearney Passes

Suffering for the past six months from rheumatism and heart affection the result of an attack of the flu, Mary Kathleen Kearney, a sweet and charming girl of fifteen years and seven months passed into everlasting light last Tuesday afternoon. Although enduring harrowing pain the little girl bore up bravely for she was aware her pain would soon be over and she would soon be with Him who giveth joy and comfort to those who love Him. A little less than a year ago she graduated from St. Joseph's Parochial school. Radiant with joy in anticipation of entering the high school at Redwood City her joy knew no bounds, but she was doomed to disappointment for shortly after going to the high school she was taken sick and for six months was confined to her bed, suffering intensely. Her beautiful graduating garments served as her burial and the boys who were her class mates acted as her pall bearers. This is sad indeed, but her parents and young friends will find consolation in the thought that Mary's pure white white soul has gone to her heavenly father, unstained and undefiled by the world and its temptation, there to await those she loved on earth. The little girl was born in Menlo Park, where her parens, Mr. and Mrs. P. Kearney have resided for over a quarter of a century.

The funeral took place on Thursday and interment was in Holy Cross cemetery, Colma. The pallbearers were Edward O'Keefe, James Harold O'Keefe, Joseph Morey, John Morey, Richard Roach and Frank Roach.

P.-T. A. To Give Musical

The Menlo Park Parent-Teacher Association will give a musical in the auditorium of the school building next Friday evening, April 19. We regret that lack of space does not permit the publishing of the entire program.

Sister Dies In Oakland

Miss Beatrice Harrington, sister of Thomas Harrington of Menlo Park, passed away at Oakland last week following a long illness. The young lady often visited her relatives here and was well known in this locality.

April 19th Date of Election

On April 19 the people of Menlo Park will be given an opportunity to vote for incorporation, a chance to say whether they want to progress or retrograde. It will be up to the voters to determine. If they neglect the golden opportunity now offered, the town may be set back for a long period. If Menlo Park is incorporated it certainly will go ahead with rapid strides and become one of the attractive cities of the peninsula. The greatest benefit to be derived from incorporation is the zoning of the town, describing business sections and residential territory, and the placing of restrictions on buildings so that shacks would not mar the beautiful landscape. We must stress this plan of zoning for without Menlo Park will soon become a land of week-end shacks. The taxpayers are urged to vote for incorporation and make Menlo Park a beter place in which to reside. The following are the citizens who have filed their nomination papers and are making the campaign for the various offices:

Trustees, J. C. Brown, H. A. Chandler, J. E. Cooper, J. J. Harcom, W. J. Murray, Rogers Reynolds, George L. Scott and George B. Walsh. Five of the eight candidates are to be chosen and will compose the first board of trustees. City Clerk, John B. Kelly and Mrs. Fannie I. Kurtz, one to be elected; treasurer, James D. O'Kane. The appointive officers are a town recorder and a marshel.

SAN CARLOS

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thomilsen of San Francisco were week end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wheeler.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Worth were visitors at the home of Mrs. Bell Burnet on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Dietricksen of San Francisco were week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Burton.

Thirteen tables of enthusiastic whist players enjoyed the card party and dance given by the San Carlos P.-T. A. at the school house on aSturday evening.

Mrs. B. Frizzle and Mrs. Simpgen held the lucky numbers for the door prize.

CARD OF THANKS

The relatives and family of the late Miss Addie Tripp wish to express their appreciation of the sympahty and kindness of neighbors and friends at the time of their bereavement, and to thank those who sent floral offerings on that occasion.

WOODSIDE

Twenty-five girls, members of the junior Y. W. C. A. of San Francisco, are taking advantage of the school vacation and are enjoying an outing in the hills back of Woodside this week. They are camped on the A. Schilling place with only the leafy tree tops for a tent. Each girl brought her own blanket and frying pan and is seriously endeavoring to learn the woodman's art of being comfortable with a minimum equipment.

The baseball team of the local school arranged a game with Menlo School for last Friday afternoon The public was invited and the public came but the opposing team failed to put in an appearance. Finally the high school lads from this district took the field and gave the local team some competition.

An election will be held at the town hall on Monday to choose the commissioners for the Woodside Fire District. The present commissioners are Selah Chamberlain, James V. Neuman and Stanley Morshead. It is hoped that they will still be the commissioners after the election. The fire house is nearly completed and another week will see the big engine installed in its new home.

Mrs. Charles Josselyn and Miss Marjorie Josselyn have opened their home here for the summer season.

The families of Herbert Gallagher and Dr. Alanson Weeks have been spending the holidays at their country home here.

Carl Anderson motored to Monterey on Thursday to inspect the marine biological laboratory there. He spent two days at the laboratory and on the waters of Monterey bay hunting specimens for the use of his high school classes. Mrs. Phoebe Hetrick of San Francisco was a guest of Mrs. Anderson on Thursday and Friday.

Miss Louise Mahon, who has been the organist and choir director of the Woodside church, has accepted a position as organist of the church at Campbell. She will be greatly missed for she has created an interest in music among the young people of this church.

Mrs. John D. Gish will leave on Wednesday for a visit with Mrs. Bradford Leavitt at Pasadena. She will be gone for three weeks. The eLavits will open their home The Leavitts will open their home side for about three months.

ST. CYR ESTATE APPRAISAL IS MADE

The total valuation of the estate of the late Mrs. Anne Armstrong of St. Cyr, wife of Jean de St. Cyr, Hillsborough capitalist and clubman, is $1,002,189.78, according to an inventory and appraisement filed this week in the office of County Clerk Eliabeth M. Kneese by Donlad Barker of Los Angeles, attorney for the estate.

Of the total amount, $8844.32 is in actual cash, according to the inventory, with the remainder of the estate invested in stock and bonds.

The principal investment of the late Mrs. St. Cyr is 2556 shares of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, valued at $194,256. The smallest investment is 50 shares of the Submarine Boat Corporation valued at $437.50.

Mrs. St. Cyr, before marrying Jean de St. Cyr, was the widow of the late "Silent" Smith, nationally known Chicago capitalist. Previous to that, she was the wife of William Rhinelander Stewart of New York. She is survived by two children, William Rhinelander Stewart, Jr., and Princess Braganza, widow of a Spanish nobleman. Mrs. St. Cyr's death occurred a year ago at the Hillsborough estate.

H. C. Tuchsen, inheritance tax appraiser, fixed the values of the estate.

HARR WAGNER ADDRESSES WOMAN'S CLUB HERE

Harr Wagner, the well-known publisher of western literature and himself a writer of western history, addressed the Redwood City Woman's Club Thursday. Mr. Wagner talked on the life and writings of Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras.

There probably is no one who is more familiar with the great poet, as Mr. Wagner traveled with Miller for years and served him as manager and publisher. The address was greatly enjoyed by all of the ladies.
